This restaurant in Patna has received mixed reviews from customers. While many praise the quality and taste of the food, some have raised concerns about the slow and unprofessional service. The restaurant is known for its South Indian dishes, with some patrons suggesting that the quality has declined due to heavy online orders. Despite some issues with service, the restaurant remains a popular choice for those looking for vegetarian options in the area. Overall, it seems that while the food is generally well-received, improvements could be made in terms of service efficiency and professionalism.
